Bruce Rose is a partner in Alston & Bird's national Intellectual Property Litigation Group. He concentrates his practice on prosecuting and defending complex patent, trade secret, trademark, and copyright infringement litigation. Bruce counsels clients on obtaining, protecting, licensing, and enforcing intellectual property. He has significant experience preparing and prosecuting patent applications in the chemical and chemical engineering fields.

Bruce has litigated a wide variety of intellectual property cases through discovery, trial, and appeal in numerous courts throughout the U.S. He has litigated infringement cases in multiple U.S. district courts. His patent cases have covered complex subject matter, such as pharmaceutical compositions, complex chemical manufacturing processes, oil and gas production, and related safety systems, barcode scanners, electronic retail security systems, cell preservative solutions used for cancer screening, methods for disease control in avian species, optical fiber manufacturing, phase change materials and devices, and various computer and cellular device technologies. Bruce has extensive experience in inter partes review proceedings and investigations before the U.S. International Trade Commission. Bruce is registered to practice before U.S. District Courts for the Western, Middle, and Eastern Districts of North Carolina, the state courts of North Carolina, USPTO, Patent Trial and Appeal Board, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit, and U.S. Supreme Court. Bruce has been recognized by The Best Lawyers In America® since 2013.
