Jason Troff has dedicated the past 25 years to his career as a litigation support professional with varied roles from e-discovery and analytics consulting, team building and leadership, project management, workflow and process development, and creative solutions to non-standard situations.

Jason listens to our clients about potential pain points and objectives on each of his cases and then advises on cost-effective and defensible e-discovery and production strategies. His extensive familiarity with legal technology helps him oversee each of his projects efficiently and develop support workflows to control costs and ensure accurate solutions. Although he currently specializes in Relativity, Jason has previous certifications in iConect, Concordance, and Summation. He also has extensive experience with Ipro, Axcelerate, OpenText Insight, and other litigation support tools.
