Lucas Queiroz Pires is a special legal consultant with the International Trade & Regulatory Group at Alston & Bird in Washington, D.C. He deals with a variety of international trade issues, including customs, antidumping and countervailing duty proceedings, trade policy, free-trade agreements, sanctions, and export controls.

Lucas took part in an internship program at the Legal Affairs Division of the World Trade Organization (WTO) in Geneva. He was also a senior associate of the International Trade and Government Affairs practices at Demarest Advogados, one of the biggest law firms in Brazil and a Lex Mundi partner of Alston & Bird.

Representative Experience

- Advised clients in various customs matters, including tariff classification, valuation, rules of origin, tariffs, preferential trade agreements, and import compliance programs.
- Represented domestic and foreign companies in U.S. antidumping, countervailing duty proceedings, and tariff matters before the U.S. Department of Commerce and the U.S. International Trade Commission, and related actions before the U.S. Court of International Trade.
- Represented several clients in U.S. Section 232 steel and aluminum actions, Section 301 measures concerning products from China and the EU, and related advocacy and exclusion processes.
