MJ Kim is an associate in Alston & Bird's Construction & Government Contracts Group. She represents owners, contractors, developers, and other construction-industry professionals on a wide variety of construction-related matters, including contract drafting and negotiation, project management, dispute resolution, and complex litigation. She also provides counseling to government contractors on regulatory compliance, procurement protests, and government investigations.

Before joining Alston & Bird, she earned her J.D., magna cum laude, from Georgia State University College of Law. MJ received her B.A., summa cum laude, in public and political communications with a minor in psychology from Georgia State University, where she actively competed on the GSU debate team.
