Noelle Reyes is an associate with Alston & Bird's Litigation & Trial Practice Group. Noelle gained experience in the technology and privacy space as a legal and compliance intern at a multinational telecommunications and information technology corporation where she analyzed new agreements for risk assessment in consideration to block chain technology and data privacy regulation, managed patent litigation cases, and mitigated organizational compliance risks. She also completed a legal clerkship with a trial boutique firm, focusing primarily on patent litigation and appellate work.

Noelle graduated with her J.D. from the University of California, Berkeley, where she was an associate editor of the Berkeley Technology Law Journal and student researcher for the Samuelson Law, Technology & Public Policy Clinic. Noelle was on the leadership board of the Women of Berkeley Law group and studied international law at Georgetown's Center for Transnational Legal Studies in London. She has also done significant pro bono work for the Veteran's Administration Legal Clinic and Homelessness Services Project during law school, graduating with pro bono honors with highest distinction. Before law school, Noelle served as an enlisted psychiatric medic and counselor in the United States Air Force, achieving the rank of staff sergeant.
