Paul Ghazaryan is a member of Alston & Bird’s Construction & Government Contracts Group. He represents a broad range of clients in negotiating contracts and in litigation related to construction dispute claims.

Before joining the firm, Paul worked at a national law firm advising clients in construction disputes and commercial litigation claims. Paul received his J.D. from the University of Southern California. During law school, Paul worked at a boutique firm advising on a range of issues relating to the acquisition and development of U.S. real properties and tax controversy matters. He also served as an intern with EY, advising Fortune 500 companies on cross-border transactions. Paul received his B.A., cum laude, in economics from the University of California, Irvine.
